2007 Conclave Learning Conference Begins Construction of New Industry. The building blocks for a dynamic rebuilding of the radio industry were laid during the weekend of June 28-July 1 at the 32nd annual Conclave Learning Conference, as hundreds of industry professionals, teachers and students descended upon the Minneapolis Marriott City Center for RADIO UNDER CONSTRUCTION. Over 40 sessions covering every major radio format, technology and resource were presented to packed meeting rooms throughout the conference weekend. THE TATTLE R has been presenting stories about the event originally found on the pages and websites of the Conclave's Publicity Partners. Here's the next installment, from R&R, "Conclave 2007: The Next Big Thing" (by Paul Heine). Radio is "on a balance beam" with young listeners and must take decisive steps to lure them back, Paragon Media Strategies COO John Stevens said June 30 at the Conclave in Minneapolis

Among the steps Stevens outlined to bring millennials, or listeners aged 14-21, back to the fold: * airing new music that is not currently being played on terrestrial stations * increasing musical variety * creating new formats and new approaches * expanding station libraries * using technology to create online social networking sites. "Radio needs to offer young listeners more than just convenience," Stevens said. "They want less repetition, more daring music and more adventurous formats that are wider and cater to their tastes." Stevens was speaking as one of four panelists in a "Next Big Thing" session at the Conclave, moderated by All Access founder Joel Denver Michael Dalfonzo, co-founder of streaming services provider JetCast, said stations should stop simulcasting commercials online for free. If clients are unwilling to pay more for spots to also run online, stations should replace them with streaming-only content, music, backells and promos, Dalfonzo said Ivan Braiker, CEO of text messaging vendor HipCricket, prescribed texting as a tool that "allows you to reach listeners when they have the radio off, lure them back to your station and keep you top of mind." Texting can even be used to conduct music research, he said. Listeners opt-in via the station Web site and are then sent a text invitation to participate in a music survey. Another mobile phone-as-research tool option described by Braker involves stations texting an alert to their opt-in database that a specific song will air in 15 minutes. The message asks the recipient to text the word "hit" or "miss" after the tune plays, yielding instant music research results Tisa LaSorte, the new brand manager for Emmis classic rock WLUP (the Loop) and alternative WKQX (Q101)/Chicago, presented a case for redefining terrestrial radio by adopting new media thinking and a "360-degree multi-point product experience." To manage high online streaming costs, LaSorte said the Loop only streams morning man Jonathan Brandmeier's show and that Q101 streams are confined to 9 a.m.-5 p.m. workday hours However the station sites offer numerous other listener enticements, including concert ticket presales, on-demand artist performances, station-branded iTunes music stores, video of station events and jocks as VJs doing music reviews. Emmis-Chicago hired two videographers to feed the sites. Radio "jobs are changing," said LaSorte, who has a marketing background and replaced two veteran programmers at the cluster. "We need to adapt to this 360-degree environment. A station Web site should have its own content and not be just a promo tool to get them back to the radio station. It's another way to build a community." HD radio, touched on only briefly in the session, was declared "on life support" by Delfonzo, who predicted that automakers will equip cars with WiFi before HD. Stevens said that if consolidation had delivered on its promise of greater format diversity, "satellite radio would have never happened." (The Conclave thanks Barb, RadioAndRecords.com, radio-info.com, insideradio.com, fmqb.com, radioink.com, and allaboutcountry.com for communicating the magic of a very special June weekend in Minneapolis.)

Project 100 Radio, the great brainchild of Mitch Baldwin and Will Harvey, will be ending their adventure on August 2! They spent 100 days visiting 55 morning radio shows (with a great stopover at The Conclave!) to find out what each has to deliver to its audience. They stopped this week at KMS on CBS Talk WHFS/Baltimore. You can still catch their trek at the annual Morning Show Boot camp, August 9-11 at the Swissotel in Chicago.

Morning man Scotty Wylde of Artistic Top 40 WNDV/South Bend got some big publicity this past weekend. Says Scotty, "Saturday, I hosted the College Football Hall of Fame Enshrinement Fanfest in South Bend. The event featured a parade, hall of fame flag football game, youth clinic, autograph session, and more!"

Former Cumulus Sports WTKA-AM/Ann Arbor host Dave Shand has decided to take legal action by suing the University of Michigan Athletic Director Bill Martin. Martin is being accused of "economic blackmail," to force Shand's firing. Shand alleges that Martin threatened to pull Michigan football from the station unless it fired Shand, which WTKA did in April. Shand is an alumnus of Michigan and its law school, and seeks damages of over $75,000. Shand stated, "Using your power and leverage as athletic director at Michigan, and using Michigan football to order to bludgeon me out of a job with a private employer is just wrong."

David Fitts, GM of Northwestern College Christian AC KTIS/Minneapolis, announced this week the resignation of Kurt Wallace from the station's programming team, only a month after he began with the station. He commented, "We are saddened that Kurt Wallace resigned on Friday due to reasons that Wallace explained as, 'I just felt like I missed the Lord's call on this. I felt I was supposed to be part of the team at KTIS, but after arriving in the T win Cities, I never seemed to have a peace about being here.'"

Scott Cortelyou, the legally embroiled former co-host of "Business for Breakfast" at Talk KRCN-AM/Denver, was sentenced this week to 18 months' probation and registration as a sex offender in Jefferson County court. Cortelyou was a longtime radio personality, and in April plead guilty to a felony charge of trying to lure who he thought was a 12-year-old girl into sex via the internet. He apologized for his actions in court, and told District Judge Jack Berryhill that he will "not return to that environment whatsoever." Defense attorney Craig Silverman noted that Cortelyou had resisted the advances of the undercover investigator while he was chatting online, telling her she was too young and that it would be illegal.

Big changes at Clear Channel WISN-AM/Milwaukee, as the station has officially hired former crosstown Journal Talk WTMJ morning host/anchor Ken Herrera as News Director, starting next week. He was fired in May and rumors have been flying that he would join Clear Channel. WISN has also cancelled the station's "Early Spin" morning show, which leaves hosts Dan Deibert and Nicole Devin without contracts. Deibert is a veteran of stations in Green Bay, Madison, and Wausau, and is a noted standup comic. Producer Keith Conrad was also let go.
